Book synopsis

Among Adventists all around the world there is a renewed interest in missions. There is, at the same time, a feeling of powerlessness as they sense the greatness of the unfinished task. There is confusion as to their relationship to other mission agencies. There is a probing for answers to questions such as: Is there salvation outside the Christian message? What is the relationship of Christianity to culture? What is the role of the modern missionary? How does Gospel Proclamation interact with Social Action?

Contents

Contents: The changing role of missions - The Biblical basis - Strategies for missions - Two African Church histories - Women in missions - Adventist overseas missions.
